

Did you know?

A transplant coming from an Aboriginal person is more likely to benefit another Aboriginal person. This is why organ and tissue donation within the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander community is so important.

There are many Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people waiting for transplants but not enough organs are donated for everyone to get the transplant they need.

organ and tissue donors save lives

Join the Australian Organ Donor Register today

Visit donatelife.gov.au
Phone 1800 777 203

To contact DonateLife in your state or territory please visit www.donatelife.gov.au/find-your-local-donatelife-agency

Australian Government
Organ and Tissue Authority

Organ and tissue donors save lives

Yarn with your mob

What is an organ and tissue donor?

An organ and tissue donor is someone who donates their body organs after they die so a person with sick organs can get better.

The organs that you donate go to the people who are the most sick across all of Australia.

You need to decide if you want to donate your organs after you have finished up. If you decide to be an organ and tissue donor you can save the lives of up to 7 people!

An organ donor can save the life of up to 7 people

Yarn to your family

When you decide, it's very important to talk with your family about your organ and tissue donation decision because they will be asked about your wishes.

Cover and inside art by A. Nungarrayi Martin.

